Maneuvers Underway in Germany

Heidelberg, Germany, Sept. 11—(AP)—The Atlantic "Big Three" powers put nearly 100,000 troops in the field here today to test their skill at repelling a mock invasion from the East.

High ranking military observers from all the Atlantic pact nations, including Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of U. S. field forces, were on hand to see how the U. S., British and French western troops would acquire themselves in the week-long maneuvers.

The test will involve tanks, planes and simulated paratroop drops behind the front lines. A U. S. cavalry regiment is representing a mythical enemy force of some six divisions, striking into western Germany from the Russian zone and Czechoslovakia.

Officials said the maneuver was planned last winter "long before the Korean fighting began." They described it as routine.

Gen. Clark told reporters he has been directed to report on the fitness of American troops when he returns to Washington. He said additional U. S. troops, approved Saturday by President Truman, probably will begin arriving in western Germany soon.

Some Washington sources have estimated that as many as five or more divisions will be sent to Europe.

Simulating the actual comparative troop strength of the western powers and Russia in Germany the Allies are outnumbered more than two to one by the "invading" force.

Manning the ground defenses during the mock invasion are the crack U. S. First Infantry division and the U. S. constabulary's first and second brigades. They are being joined by France's Seventh Algerian regiment and Britain's first Royal Dragons.

The FORMER MISS FREY

By Edwin R. Copyright 1950 by NEA Service, Inc.

THE STORY: Although Caroline Frey has never before been a beauty queen, she has been a beauty queen in the past. She was Miss Frey in 1949.

Jenn said. "I'm not taking any impudence from a kid like you. You're not in such good care, yourself, right now, young lady. Running around with a guy twice your age."

Color flamed into Jennifer's cheeks. "Mind your own business, Jeff Frey."

Myron lit a cigarette in absent fashion and began spilling ashes over the rug.

"Oh, listen," Ede said, a little catch in her voice. "This is pretty terrible. Quarreling with Father only just buried. Please understand that I'm only going to try to carry out his wishes. He wanted his business kept intact, and in the family. That's what's going to happen if I—if we—can humanly do it. And none of us will lose by it. So let's forget it now, please, and tomorrow we'll go into things at the office." She turned to Myron. "By the way, Myron, what do you do down there?"

"Eh?" Myron started. "Oh, I'm in the media department."

"And just what is the media department?"

JENN waved both hands in exasperation. "There you are. That's great, isn't it? In charge of an advertising agency and she doesn't even know what a media department is."

Ede rose abruptly. Her eyes, curiously light-green now, were narrowed. "You are being nasty, Jeff," she said. "Up to now, whether you know it or not, I've been sympathizing with you. But I'm beginning to lose some of my sympathy. As the eldest son you ought, possibly, to be in full charge. But Dad wanted it other-wise and, so far, you've been a rotten sport about it. I don't think I want to talk to you any more now. So—good night!"

In her own room Ede changed to gray crepe de chine pajamas and sat for a while at the dressing table, brushing her bronze-colored hair with long sweeping strokes. Her hair seemed almost alive tonight, sparkling in the subdued light. Little electric clicks filled the room. She brushed vigorously, partly from habit, partly because the slight exercise seemed to relieve her irritation over Jeff's attitude. Jeff had certainly acted like a spoiled and petulant child. The thought called Peter Flood to mind and she put down her brush abruptly. She had to write to Peter at once. Upon her father's death she had wired him, urging him not to think of coming up for the funeral. It would have been, though she didn't say so in the wire, something near the height of hypocrisy.

Peter had replied with a long telegram of condolence. Ede was to do whatever she felt necessary in New York and get back to Bermuda as soon as she could.

Now, however, it was necessary to break it to him that she might be in New York indefinitely. Frowning, she nibbled the end of her pen. Peter hated New York, except when he was enjoying success, and the roar of the crowd and the critics. Now he had no success to enjoy.

SHE wrote him a long explanatory letter. As she was signing it Jenn came in, without the formality of knocking.

Jenn was in a dark-blue silk negligee with little silver stars on the collar. Her hair was a coppery drift.

"Ede," Jenn sat down on the chaise. "I've just come to say that I'd like to smack Jeff Frey right across his face."

"Oh, forget it," said Ede. "He'll come to his senses."

"He's an idiot," Jenn said emphatically. "As if you'd asked to be put in a spot like this."

"I certainly didn't ask for it. Father wished it on me beautifully."

"Well, what's going to happen now?" Jenn inquired. "I mean about your—about Peter?"

"Peter," Ede said, "will just have to come to New York for a while."

Barre, Pa., and vicinity. First reports indicated no on-board the 17-car "Spirit" was killed, although its locomotive toppled over an embankment.

"We either were stopped or slowed down when the crash came," said Capt. Robert Short of Dallas, Pa. He is commander of the 109th's Battery A, whose men slept in the third car from the rear.

The crash occurred about 5 a. m. on a straight stretch of track just west of West Lafayette, which is 7 miles east of here.

"Our men remained calm," Captain Short related. "I told them to stay put until we found out what happened. Then within two minutes we all turned out to help the injured and remove them from the smashed car."

Apparently none of Captain Short's men in the third car was hurt.

Col. Frank Townsend of Dallas, Pa., commander of the battalion, was in the ill-fated last car, but escaped injury by jumping.

The colonel "had everything under control" in a short time, Captain Short said, organizing relief parties, putting a guard about the scene and detaching soldiers to call for nurses and physicians.

Physicians, nurses and blood donors were called in from Cambridge,

Arms Program for U. S. Goes Into Gear

Washington, Sept. 11—(AP)—President Truman's new war mobilization machinery, eared to a $30,000,000-a-year arms program, began to roll today under a production boss borrowed from industry.

William H. Harrison, president of International Telephone and Telegraph corp., walked into the hot spot as head of a new "national production authority" in the commerce department.

His first job, after today's swearing-in, was to face the steel industry—the presidents of 21 companies, invited here to discuss how to divide steel supplies between booming civilian factories and mushrooming war plants.

This was the first move in a mobilization against Communist aggression, which Mr. Truman said Saturday night may last many years and will require sacrifices of every American.

A series of orders is expected to follow. But actual "allocations"—that is, assignments of steel and other materials to particular users—may not begin for weeks.

And civilian goods—autos, television sets, freezers and others—may not be affected for months.

Immediately ahead perhaps within this week, are:

1. Issuance of a scarcity list by Mr. Truman

DOROTHY DIX Take a Chance

Dear Miss Dix: My fiancé and I cannot settle a question that has been worrying us. We have been engaged for four years and want to marry, but he owes some money and is afraid that if we get married he might not be able to pay it and would lose his business and then what would he do with me? So, I think that perhaps we had better wait three years more until he pays his debt off. He owes his business and his home, and his business is prospering. I am willing to take a chance and feel that I could help him as I've earned my own living. Another thing is that his mither would have to live with us. What should we do?

UNHAPPY

Answer: Get married as soon as you can. Any engagement that has lasted four years has lasted too long and if you add three more years of waiting to it, it will just peter out through sheer discouragement. Your love promises are overdone. It's time you made good on them. If everybody waited to marry until every single problem connected with it was settled, there would be very few weddings. You have to take a chance on marriage as you do on everything else in life. You Can Help Him

Don't let the debt keep you apart, for you will be a help instead of a hindrance to your husband in paying it off. For one reason, your husband will be able to concentrate upon his job better than he does now, when his thoughts are torn between love and longing and his business. He'll feel settled and that he has a wife to work for and that will put fresh strength and energy into him. Very few men ever really achieve anything before marriage. It's after marriage that they become go-getters for the women they love.

Also courtship is very expensive business and it is money in a man's pocket when he can cut out the high cost of loving and not have to put up for theatre and movies, and flowers and presents and the other incidentals to taking the girl friend out and giving her a good time.

Of course, having to live with your husband's mother is your real problem and nobody can tell you how to solve that. Having to live with a mother-in-law, and especially one who is bossy and who is already installed as the mistress of her son's house, is going to call for the patience of Job, the humility of Griselda and the finesse of a diplomat and, alas, few young women are possessed of these qualities.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I would never contemplate marrying a man in moderate circumstances for I have had enough drudgery in my life. I could never settle down into being a housewife. My life has been too active. A woman can learn to love any man who is worth his salt and has the essential sugar in his pocket. What are your reactions?

Answer: It has been my observation that logic flies out of the window when love comes knocking at the door, and that the most carefully laid plans of girls go haywire when some personable youth comes whistling down the street and beckons them to follow.

Chrysler Announces New Model

The luxurious Chrysler Imperial line has been augmented by the addition of a new model, the Imperial Deluxe, it is announced by Joseph A. O'Malley, general sales manager of the Chrysler Division.

The new model has an added touch of exclusiveness in its appointments, featuring a rich combination of top-grain leather and Nylon cord fabrics for upholstery and interior trim.

It is available in three colorful combinations—blue, gray, and black; blue, gray, and tan; and black, gray, and tan. The Imperial Deluxe is available in Town and Country models.

Interior fittings, chrome, wood, and leather are finished in rich selections to harmonize with the exterior. Demand for the new Imperial Deluxe is expected to be high, as it has far exceeded original expectations, Mr. O'Malley stated.

The added refinement of the Imperial Deluxe is the indicated public preference for an even greater degree of exclusiveness, he stated.

In addition to its interior, the Imperial Deluxe offers all the luxury features of the Imperial 6-passenger, standard equipment. These include automatic electric windows, double-width folding center seat for front and rear seats, sidewall tires, and chrome covers.

The model has a wheelbase of 131 one-half inches and is powered by the 135-horsepower Chrysler V-8 engine. It is equipped with Prestomatic Fluid Drive transmission and Chrysler's new ignition system as standard equipment.

vinced that that you cannot love to order. You can admire and respect a man for his good qualities, but it won't raise your temperature or send a single quiver up and down your spine to know that he is kind to his mother and has money in the bank. The something that makes you palpitate and thrill and that causes some one particular man to be the whole universe to you has nothing whatever to do with his virtues, or his ability to support you in the style in which you desire to live.

Of course, much is to be paid for the sensible marriage, the marriage that is based on reason and not on sentiment. Undoubtedly those who pick out their mates with their heads instead of their hearts, and who select a wife or a husband because he or she is industrious and right social set or has money or because he or she is a good manager, may generally count on a quiet and placid existence and keeping out of the divorce court. Provided, of course, that after a while they do not get tired of plain bread and butter and long for cake.

Dear Dorothy Dix: A young girl has been asked to accompany a young man alone on a long automobile trip. He is well known to her family and held in great esteem by all who know him. Upon my questioning the propriety of such a trip I was greeted with gales of laughter by both mother and daughter. Am I hopelessly archaic, or are my friends too advanced for my way of thinking?

GODMOTHER

Answer: You are absolutely right and the mother and daughter must be strangely unsophisticated if they think that the girl can violate one of the oldest and most ironbound of all conventions without having the worst possible construction put upon it. It isn't enough for a girl to be good. She has to look good.

Twice as useful as any ordinary car! Use it as a beautiful sedan seating six! Or fold down the hinged back seat and cushion... and you have a level deck 6½ feet long. You can sleep on it... load all your hunting and fishing gear... haul farm implements, fence posts—a thousand and one things no regular car can carry. It's like having two cars in one. Come see how the new Chrysler Traveler does double duty. Take the wheel... see how Chrysler's built-in value all the way through is made with new utility that beats anything on the road.

See how the rear seat cushion folds forward against the front seat back, and rear seat back turns down to form flat, level-loading platform. Spare tire can be carried in passenger compartment, or in wall of right of luggage compartment.

Counter-balanced trunk lid opens easily, and stays open for easy loading. Sturdy luggage rack on roof adds conveniently to the huge storage space. Upholstery is tough plastic that resembles grained alligator hide.

Economy Curbs Seem to Be in Sight

JAMES M. WARD
Washington, Sept. 11 (AP). — You know, from what President Truman said in his Saturday address, how far this country has come in re-arming or in using economic controls.

Probably he doesn't know himself. Relations with Russia get better, then the government will be re-arming and imposing economic controls than seem to be in sight now.

But the President didn't have power to control prices and wages until Congress passed a bill giving him that power. And this was so recently that he had to sign the bill into law until last week.

And even now, with that power in hand, the President could hardly control nationwide price and wage controls without causing chaos. You can imagine why.

There is no government agency to handle the gigantic problems that would be created overnight if Truman suddenly ordered nationwide wage controls.

But in his week-end talk he indicated he was creating a successor to OPA, to be called the economic stabilization agency, a new government agency.

Mr. Truman seems to have changed his mind about the possibility of such a new agency. It was only several weeks ago he indicated the regular government agencies already in existence could handle any economic controls that might be needed.

But even the ESA will have to be set up, and that will take time. There is no such widespread consensus as impossible until the ESA is well established, and ready. Of course, in thinking of ESA, this thought comes first to mind.

Contestants From Arkansas Do All Right

By The Associated Press
Arkansas' beauty queens did all right for themselves over the weekend, although they didn't win top honors.

Miss Arkansas, Mary Lois Jennings of Hot Springs, placed fourth in the Miss America beauty pageant at Atlantic City, N. J. She won a $2,000 scholarship.

Mrs. Arkansas, Mrs. Emma Frances Holt of Hope, won a housecleaning trophy in the Mrs. America contest at Asbury Park, N. J.

If the controls come, will all prices and wages suddenly be controlled at one time or will the President just slap the controls on, say, only some one industry whose prices get out of line?

The President himself doesn't seem sure of the answer to that one. In his talk, he made it plain he's puzzled about what the new law will let him do. He said:

"We cannot yet be sure that the new law permits effective use of selective controls. As a result, we might have to resort to general controls before they really are necessary. This may prove to be a serious defect in the law which will require correction."

So far the only restriction ordered by the government under the new law to keep the country's economic wagon rolling down a straight road is on installment buying. To make people put up larger down-payments and pay up in full in less time.

The idea there is, by making installment buying a little tougher, to discourage buying something, particularly in fields where goods may be scarce. It's hoped this will put a brake on rising prices.

As for the other controls, the President's attitude seems to be: "It's up to the people whether we have price and wage controls. If businessmen get greedy and start jacking up prices unnecessarily, or if labor makes unjust demands for higher wages, and in that way forces up prices, controls will be needed."

The President didn't say anything about rationing. But under the new law the government can order rationing on anything whenever it gets scarce and people scramble for it.

That's one of the weapons the government has in the new economic law. But, again, there can't be any rationing until there's a government agency — the ESA — set up to handle it.

America Had Warning of Korean War

By ELTON C. FAY
AP Military Affairs Reporter
Washington, Sept. 11 (AP)—Nine unsung prophets three years ago gave the government a remarkably accurate picture of the type of war in which the United States is now engaged.

What they wrote into an official report on May 20, 1947, sounds like a history of how this country became involved in the war with the Communists in Korea.

"We might become involved in a war through the aggressive tactics of some nation against its neighbors, in a distant part of the world, which we and the United Nations could not countenance either because of ultimate threats to world security or because our international conscience would not permit us to stand passive while the rights and liberties of others were transgressed. Such involvement might come at any time."

"The tactics of the aggressor would start with political infiltration into surrounding countries. That would be followed by military and political domination and, if allowed to proceed unchecked, it would spread to even broader areas. These tactics might be directed to the realization of a 'geopolitical' program comparable to that undertaken by the Axis powers and aimed at the control of all or the greater part of Europe and Asia."

"Such a program would inevitably have as its final goal the rumble of the United States. x x x If we were permitted to carry out this program without challenge, the enemy would, of course, wait until he had the atomic bomb or a comparable weapon before attacking us directly."

This forecast of how the United States could become involved in another conflict was a chapter—"Nature of possible future warfare"—in an advisory report to President Truman on the need for universal military training. UMT is again a live issue, but one that Congress has put off until next year.

Who were the prophets who wrote the forecast? Just citizens, neither professional diplomats nor military experts—a scientist-college professor, churchmen, industrialists, labor experts, a judge.

The members of the advisory commission were Dr. Karl T. Compton, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Joseph E. Davies, former ambassador to Moscow; Daniel A. Poling, clergyman; Father Edmund A. Walsh of Georgetown university; Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric; Justice Samuel I. Rosenman, who was an adviser of the late President Roosevelt; Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, industrial relations consultant; Truman K. Gibson, Jr., lawyer; and Dr. Harold W. Dodds of Princeton.

Are American Men Dodging the Draft

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—Are American men dodging the new draft?

Not the overwhelming majority. There have been a few well-reported soft spots in the draft here and there over the nation. New York City is one of them. Chicago somewhat less so.

But on a national basis, a 20-city survey by the Associated Press shows the young men of 1950 are doing their duty as well and as quietly as the young men of 1940 or the young men of 1917.

That is not to say the selective service system's hasty switch from peace to war has been smooth. It could hardly be. But neither has it shown any widespread bad morale, malingering, or organized resistance to America's stand in Korea.

Some shocking figures on draft delinquencies have been printed in recent weeks — mostly in the big cities. Some of these have reached the total of 30 per cent.

If that meant what it seemed, things would be in very bad shape indeed. It would amount to a national sit-down strike that would fatally sabotage American power abroad and give the enemy more than just aid and comfort.

It's true that in New York City 12 per cent of the men actually failed to show up for one induction call — a very serious matter, especially for the men.

It's also true that in Chicago and other big cities like Baltimore, St. Louis and Indianapolis from 15 to 30 per cent have failed to answer draft board letters or to show up for pre-induction physical examinations.

But in contrast to this, the pre-induction delinquencies have been much less than one per cent in Portland, Maine, and Portland, Oregon. In Texas and Colorado. . . In Kansas City and Milwaukee and North Carolina. And in these states — and many others — willful delinquencies are almost at the vanishing point.

What the figures mean, draft officials seem to agree, is simply that a lot of young Americans in our quick-shifting population have just moved away and left no forwarding address.

GOOD SCOUT — In Pusan, South Korea, local Boy Scouts have taken over as traffic cops since the regular police force was sent north to handle the civilian populations evacuating the battle areas.

Lucas, Taft Swap Words on U. S. Policy

Washington, Sept. 11 (AP)—Political firing on foreign policy picked up intensity today with Senator Lucas (R-Ohio) calling for election of a Republican congress to force a change in what he termed the administration's "weak and wavering" course.

Taft told a reporter before he left Washington to resume campaigning that he intends to stress international issues in telling Ohio voters he believes "there never was a time when we needed a Republican congress so much."

In Illinois, senate Democratic Leader Lucas blasted right back at the "isolationist Republicans" and "petty, political snipers" who he said "have been trying to indict their country's leaders on charges of softness toward Communism."

"My opponent is one of those who is taking a leading part in this campaign to try to befuddle the American people and undermine the bi-partisan foreign policy," Lucas declared in a Chicago address yesterday.

He is opposed by former Rep. Everet Dirksen, the Republican nominee.

Lucas said "isolationists" in Congress "led the drive to cripple the Marshall plan and opposed the Atlantic pact and military aid to European allies."

"In their attack on the bipartisan foreign policy they have repudiated their own party's foreign policy leaders, Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R-Mich) and Ambassador John Foster Dulles, and have come perilously close to echoing the line of the Communist Daily Worker," he declared.

George B. Shaw Breaks Hip in a Fall

Luton, Eng., Sept. 11 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw, the famous playwright, broke his thigh in a fall in the garden of his country home yesterday and was brought to a hospital here today for an emergency operation.

A hospital spokesman said the 94-year-old author and writer was "very comfortable" and had brought with him a small library of books.

Hospital officials indicated he would be operated on later this afternoon or tonight. No expert opinion on Shaw's condition was immediately available. But it was agreed a broken thigh at Shaw's age could produce dangerous complications.

Shaw has lived more or less in seclusion at his home in the picturesque village of Ayot St. Lawrence, 40 miles from London.
